Moving forward

Moving forward, starting by moving your-self forward first. If you move, everyone, community then your country will start to move forward too. I have a friend name is Max, He is a smart guy. He did everything that his parents want him to do. He always make a good grade and be the top of the class, but he have a secret that he never told everyone, He is gay.

Being gay in Thailand is jumble because people says they're open minded about LGBT but they still talk behind your back or some parents says they can accept about gay but in their mind be like "even it's not my child" it is a bit funny to see our society were like this.

I can say that it is fun but not with my friend, Max. He was pleasure by his parents and society because he's gay. As a matter fact, no one know he's gay but he know himself and he have to hide it. One day he decide to tell this to his parents but after he told them, they acts like they were really disappoint. They don't talk with him, they don't care about him even he's their son. I feel so sorry to him.

But on the other hand, he's quiet lucky. Someone after they told everyone that they are gay, people just thought that they are psychopath maybe just take a medicine and they will stop being gay. In Mexico, there was a rite by a shaman. They use a black goat's blood to wash a penis. They believe that it can turn gay to be a man. I think it is really cruel and unsanitary. We don't know that what are in the goat's blood and as we know, being gay isn't disease it's about what they want to be. I reckon that developed country would not do this to human.

After Max told his parents that he's gay. He acts like everything was normal. He study hard, he still keep making a good grade it is because that he want to make his parents proud of him, he think this can prove that being gay does not make him stupid. But if he tell his friend how it's going to be. Will they still talking or play with Max ? He thought about this a lot but then he decided to tell his friend. I think that he don't have to tell anyone because being gay is just one type of gender and I don't know why people still treat LGBT like they are not human being. It's 2018 and people still don't know that they aren't only two genders in this world.

As I thought, his classmate acts like they can accept it but they still talk behind his back and Max just act like nothing happened. I know that he got a lot of pleasure, not only from parents, study and now, from his classmate.

Time were passes, He got a relationship, his grade still good and he still study hard. He have a lover. He's happy and his friend or his parents knows about this but they say nothing. But it seem like destiny try to play with Max. He broke up with his boyfriend. He was really sad, every one start talking about this, about same-sex relationship. Many people just think that they broke up because they are gay but truly the main reason when two people decide to stay always to each other because they can not go together or they aren't love each other anymore, and this is happen to every gender not only same-sex relationship.

Max was really sad. He stop hand in his work, he stop everything. He don't do anything except crying. He forgot about everything he did in the past, everything that he did to prove that being gay aren't hurt him or anyone. But it seem like fall in love to someone might hurt him.

It looks like every feeling in the past comes to him this time. How friends looks and talk about him or how much his parents disappointed in him. He feeling lost, he just don't he have to do. Someone needs to lead him to the way out and it was him-self. He stop crying, he come back to be him-self and moving forward to his new him, it's doesn't mean that he stop being gay, he be him-self but stronger. He learn to move forward from his past.

And one more fun story in our society is we never care about and anything until that bad thing happen just like Max, no one care about him of his feeling until he fell down. Before we try to move our society forward we should upgrade our minded first. We should care about other people and the most important part is we must open mind about everything. Moving your mind and then society.
